

Closure of Refuge Lands Adjacent to Border

Buenos Aires National Wildlife Refuge

The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service has determined that the portion of the Buenos Aires National Wildlife Refuge south of the Garcia Road will be closed to public use under authority found in 8 RM 13.5 and 50 CFR 25.21(e) as of October 3, 2006. Garcia Road runs east/west parallel to the international boundary about one mile north of the line. This area is about 3500 acres in size. It has been determined that this portion of the Refuge poses a threat to public safety.

The situation in this zone has reached a point where continued public use of the area is not prudent. The Buenos Aires National Wildlife Refuge has been adversely affected by border-related activities. The international border with Mexico has also become increasingly violent. Assaults on law enforcement officers and violence against migrants have escalated. Violence on the Refuge associated with smugglers and border bandits has been well-documented. Many of these activities are concentrated at, or near, the border. The concentration of illegal activity, surveillance and law enforcement interdictions make these zones dangerous.

Emergency closures normally remain in effect for 30 days or less. However, the activities that have built up to this decision point are not likely to diminish in less than 30 days. We anticipate that this closure will remain in effect for a much longer period.
